OBITUARY:

Manawatu Daily Times - 18 January 1929
"With a vision in his mind of colonial life, he took a course (at what was then a novelty to farming experience) in Dairy work at Lord Vernon's private dairy factory at Sudbury, Derbyshire. There he fully equipped himself with a knowledge of verterinary work, electricity and magnetism, bacteriology and chemistry.

He came to N.Z. on the 'Bristish King' bound for Wellington with his wife and six children. On arrival, he became a partner in the firm of Buick & Co, a dairy factory at Longburn. Upon the Railway Company selling land at Tokomaru, Mr Liggins bought a section.....Established the 'Ashlea' herd of fresians. Gave more attention to milking qualities than exhibiting.

TOKOMARU SETTLER KILLED

OVERTAKEN BY TRAIN

Overtaken suddenly by the south-bound excursion train from Palmerston North as he was walking across the railway bridge about a mile south of Tokomaru between 9 and 10 o'clock yesterday morning, Mr John Henry Liggins, aged 55, a prominent settler in that district, was killed under tragic circumstances. The indications are that, too late, he had in the last fleeting seconds the realisation that the train was almost upon him.

It has been customary for settlers in the vicinity to use the bridge to cross the Tokomaru Stream, and yesterday morning Mr Liggins set out to attend to some stock on a property over the stream. His house was not far distant and his family saw him just before he reached the bridge. They heard the train pass, but entertained no fears for his safety, not thinking that he might be caught on the bridge. However, as he failed to return when expected, one of his sons went to search for him and found his body lying in the bed of the stream below the bridge. His shocking injuries made it obvious that he had been struck by the train which had passed about three-quarters of an hour previously. The engine crew were unaware that an accident had occurred.

There is an uphill approach to the bridge from both sides, and the structure is 50 or 60 feet long. Marks found show that Mr Liggins must have been about 15 feet out on it from the end nearest his home when he found the train bearing down on him and apparently knew he could not return in time. There is a drop of 15 or 20 feet to the bed of the stream, but footmarks found on girders to the side of the bridge lead to the assumption that Mr Liggins got off the sleepers and climbed out onto to these, where he would have been out of reach of the passing engine. Unfortunately he was wearing gumboots and it is surmised that the heavy vibration from the train made him slip and lose his hold, throwing him against the train, with the result that he was struck and tossed off the bridge. His efforts to escape on the side of the bridge would probably account for his not being seen by anyone on the train. The late Mr Liggins was born at Coalville, in Leicestershire, England, and came to New Zealand as a small boy with his parents, who settled at Longburn. He took up gold prospecting in the South Island, going from there with the 6th Contingent to the South African War, from which he was invalided back suffering from enteric fever. Subsequently he was manager of a dairy factory at Pahautanui before becoming manager of the late Mr Joseph Liggins's flaxmill at Tokomaru. Later he was associated with another flaxmilling business at Waitoa before volunteering for service in the Great War. He served until the cessation of hostilities, being wounded twice. After his return he took up sheep farming at Kimbolton for some years before commencing farming at Tokomaru. He was a member of the Masonic Lodge at Shannon, and of the executive of the Manawatu-Oroua branch of the New Zealand Pig Breeders Association.

The sympathy of many friends has been extended to the widow and two sons in their tragic bereavement.
